Crisis Receiving/Stabilization Centers (also known as short-term crisis residential stabilization services, community-based behavioral health stabilization, crisis stabilization, and crisis stabilization facilities) offer home-like environments that address behavioral health crisis in a community-based setting. They operate much like a hospital emergency department that accepts all walk-ins, ambulance, fire and police drop-offs. The goal of treatment is to provide a safe and secure environment where multidisciplinary professionals and peers with similar experiences provide treatment services. The Crisis Stabilization Center offers an alternative to emergency department and psychiatric hospitalization admission by providing 23-hour crisis respite and observation in the. The setting of this model resembles a home environment and offers assessment, rapid stabilization, reduction in crisis symptoms and observation in a community-based. The model seeks to provide a safe environment, relieve crisis symptoms immediately, provide observation, and determine level of care and to deflect from unnecessary higher levels of care. The National Alliance for Suicide Prevention considers Crisis Receiving/Stabilization Centers to be a "core element" of behavioral health crisis systems. The environment is safe and secure and less restrictive than a hospital setting.
